John Svenson of Upland stands beside the bronze eagle, which has the moon in its claws, and will go atop an eight-panel bas relief sculpture of the United States space program. The work is called "The Eagle Has Landed" and will be a monument standing in the Garden Grove Civic Center. The dedication will be held at 1 p.m. Friday in Garden Grove.

'The Eagle Has Landed'

Svenson's monument to be dedicated

"The Eagle Has Landed."

This is the name given to the monument created by sculptor John Svenson of Upland to be dedicated Friday in the Garden Grove Civic Center.

The monument is reputed to be the only such sculpture commemorating the history of space achievements.

In eight bas relief panels, the story of space is told with bronze figures depicting: the first American in space, 1961; the first orbit of the world, 1962; the second man to walk in space, 1965; first lunar landing, July 16, 1969; the first space station, 1973; the joint flights of the United States and their link up in space, 1975; scientists studying moon rock; and the anticipated space laboratory.

"I'm happy with it (the monument), but it has turned into more of a monumental project than I anticipated," Svenson said. The sculptor and an assistant, Conrad Divine of Claremont, were doing the last minute work of bolting the figures to the stainless steel, wheel-like circle holding the eight bas reliefs.

"I have been working on it for three years," Svenson said. "I have done more with it than I first anticipated because I feel it is worthy of national importance being the first sculpture depicting the space program."

He continued by saying, "The bronze eagle holding the moon in his claws will be above these figures (pointing to the bas reliefs), and he is the guts of the whole thing."

When erected in Garden Grove this week, the monument will stand 24 feet high. The ring of panels weighs "close to 2,000 pounds," and the eagle, "of the finest silicone bronze," weighs 700 pounds.

Svenson said the eagle is comprised of 30 pieces, and his friend, Bill Adair of Montclair, did the engineering and welding.

Upland women hear pointers on self-defense

By DINAH ROSE
Staff Writer

More than 75 Upland women got pointers on protecting themselves from attack and bunco artists in a special presentation by the police department Wednesday.

Upland Police Capt. Gary Hart and Sgt. Tom Barnhart addressed a meeting of the New Uplanders' club in an effort to increase awareness of the rising number of crimes against woman in the West End.

"To date, there have been 15 rapes reported in the city of Upland this year," said Hart. "Ten of those have been clared by arrest." Information regarding convictions is not yet available.

"That's compared to a total of 15 reported rapes during all of 1979, with 12 arrests."

Although much of the talk centered on measures women can take to protect themselves on the street, in a car and at home, Hart also addressed some basic means of delf - defense if preventive measures fail.

"But I can guarantee," he said, "if you will be discreet, be safe, and be alert — you will never get raped."

Hart sprinkled the talk with vivid examples illustrating techniques used by attackers and what women can do to avoid a confrontation.

"Remember," he told the group, "a rapist plans his crime. It's not a spur of the moment thing. He will look for the opportunity and the place. Your best defense is to minimize that opportunity."

He advised women who must be out at night to avoid walking and jogging by themselves, and to stay away from parks, alleyways and other potential hiding ground for an attacker.

A tip that he said has helped several women in the area is to carry handbags upside down with the top unzipped, one hand holding the opening securely.

When the would-be purse snatcher reaches for the bag, the contents will spill out, creating confusion and often frightening the attacker away and drawing attention from passersby.

Women should under no circumstances hitchhike or pick up hitchhikers, said Hart. When driving, an efnort should be made to stay away from dark, quiet streets, and, if any move is made by a stranger to approach the car, the woman driver should do everything she can to attract attention, including hoking the horn or running a red light if necessary.

OMSD school trustees to make agenda understandable to public

By KEN SWART
Staff Writer

The Ontario-Montclair School District board of trustees took the first step Thursday toward making their meetings more understandable to the public.

A revised agenda, reflecting the district's recent staff reorganization, will be unveiled at the board's next meeting, set Oct. 23 at 7 p.m. inside the auditorium at Central School, 412 E. G St., Ontario.

The proposed agenda will contain more background information on each item and will make specific board actions more meaningful, Superintendent Bill Plaster said.

But the major difference will be in the agenda wording. No longer will it contain a complicated board action but a proposed staff recommendation.

"I'd like to use both (new and old) formats at the next meeting and see how it feels," Plaster told the board and audience in an informal presentation at Thursday night's meeting.

Plaster said he wanted to create a new agenda because "the existing one doesn't provide the background information that the audience needs."

The whole idea of "carrying a message to the audience," Plaster said, "is to make the business of the board as public as possible."

He said he also wanted to change the established format that offered possible motions for the board to make. "I think this is a very bright board — and they (members) certainly can make their own motions."

"I think it's a good idea," said Trustee James Strait. "It's a lot better than the one we have now. Right now, all that's available (to the audience) is a very short — well, worthless document."

Plaster said he couldn't promise the new format would make the board meetings progress any faster, but he thought it would make them more meaningful.

"Go ahead ... take the big leap," board President Bill Hennie told the superintendent half-jokingly, as he spoke for the remaining four members.

There was no comment from the sparse audience on the agenda change.

Development's neighbors worry about classrooms

By JIM MARXEN
Staff Writer

Sufficient classroom space is being projected for Rancho Cucamonga's largest planned community, residents of Etiwanda were told Saturday.

Developers of the Victoria planned community, which borders on Etiwanda Avenue, told an estimated 100 residents that four new elementary schools and additional space at Etiwanda Intermediate School will handle students from the development.

Saturday's meeting was the third in a series of meeting with Etiwanda residents on Victoria. The 2,150-acre project is expected to contain nearly 10,000 housing units..

It is located west of Etiwanda Avenue from Interstate 15 to Highland Avenue.

The project is to be developed in four phases, beginning with a wind row, a row of tall trees to block out winds, next to Etiwanda Avenue.

meet changes in student populations.

With adjustments, he added, Etiwanda Intermediate School could accommodate 900 more students. The district also owns land that could be used for a second intermediate school.

To meet the demand for high school space, the Chaffey Joint Union High School District hopes to build a new facility adjacent to the planned community.

Preservation of Etiwanda Avenue was another concern. Frye said the project is designed to preserve the "rural" atmosphere of the street and to keep Etiwanda Avenue from becoming a major thoroughfare

The next meeting on the plan will take place Oct. 29 at 7 p.m. in Lion's Park Community Center.

Depression glass... Yesterday's giveaways have become treasures

By PAT DELAHOYDE
Staff Writer

Something good did come out of the Depression, according to collectors of glassware.

Depression glass — named because it was made during that period — has become big business.

Nothing produced since can match the ornate patterns and bright colors of Depression glass, said Juanita Smith of Chino, an avid collector who began her hobby 26 years ago.

In fact, she liked collecting so much that two years ago she turned it into a business, opening up a shop in Chino.

There's no denying that money can be made selling glass pieces. Since Mrs. Smith started her business, glass prices have gone up tremendously, she said.

Fifteen years ago she purchased four cups and saucers, a sugar bowl and creamer in a pattern called Green Avocado Sweet Pear. She paid $5 for the set. Today those same pieces are valued at more than $230.

One collector estimates glass prices rise about 20 percent a year. As a result, many people buy glass as an investment.

Collecting is not limited to sets and patterns produced during the Depression. People also collect animals, juice reamers, baskets, bottles, lamps and almost anything made of glass.

Glass collectors are the third-largest group among "treasure hunters," behind only coin and stamp collectors, said Lillian Dick of Pomona, founder of the Montclair Depression Glass Club.

A dealer herself, Mrs. Dick explained most Depression glass was made for promotional purposes. It was given away in cereal boxes and at movie theaters. At dime stores, a complete service for eight of Depression glassware could be purchased for as little as $1.89.

Today, collectors pay hundreds of dollars for a single piece.

Following World War II, many of the mineral compounds that produced the varied colors of Depression glass no longer were available. When companies stopped producing the glass, it became a collector's item.

Glass collecting has its own who's who. Collectors look for names such as Heisey, Cambridge, Fostoria or Duncan Miller — each name refers to a factory where glass was produced.

Collectors know the insignia (or lack of one) that is the trademark of each company. They carry books that picture each piece made by glass factories and a price guide that lists the current value of those pieces.

Since glass collecting has become big business, some companies and individuals make reproductions of prized glassware.

Most dealers can tell the difference between an original and a reproduction, Mrs. Dick said. As a general rule, she suggested, "If you're going to pay more than $5 for any glass, check it out (with a dealer)."

While reproductions should not be pawned off as originals, they do have some value. "Reproductions are the antiques of tomorrow," Mrs. Dick said.

People get involved in glass collecting in different ways. They may inherit a piece as a family heirloom or they may just see something they like. Once started, glass collectors stop at nothing to increase their sets.

They go to glass shows, estate sales, garage sales, swap meets, thrift shops and various dealers hoping to find new treasures to add to their collections.

Clubs, such as the one founded by Mrs. Dick, give collectors comradeship. At meetings, members share their collections, tell about tours of glass factories or discuss the various patterns and histories of glassware.

Some collectors subscribe to national newspapers and magazines like the Glass Review, Depression Glass Journal and Depression Glass Daze. While the publications cash in on dealer advertisements, they provide a service to collectors who scan the ads for pieces in their color and pattern.

June Eberhardt of Ontario began her collection after receiving a book on Depression glass from her mother-in-law. She recognized in the book some of the colors and patterns of glassware from her childhood.

She and her husband began to collect. They picked a favorite pattern, Blue Mayfair. That pattern was never sold in stores, Mrs. Eberhardt said. It was given out as a promotional item by the John Deere tractor company.

The Eberhardts are such avid collectors they travel as far as Sacramento and Phoenix to add to their collection. They even bought one piece from a man in Pennsylvania after spotting his ad in one of the glass collecting journals.

Interest in glass changed Jim Eberhardt from a rock hound to a glass hound. He converted the rock-cutting and buffing equipment in his workshop to glass repair tools.

Now, he operates a glass repair business out of his workshop. He receives orders for repair work from all over the United States.

While the Eberhardts are not dealers, they, with their partner, Bob Corrado, organize glass shows in the local area.

One of their shows is being held today and Sunday at the Masonic Temple, Vine Avenue and J Street, Ontario.

Just as glass pieces come in all ages and sizes, so do glass collectors.

Tiffany Onstot, 13, of Ontario, is the youngest member of the Montclair Depression Glass Club. She started collecting at the age of three when she pointed out from her stroller the glass pieces she wanted.

Tiffany comes from a family of collectors. She was even named after a kind of glass. She supports her collecting habit by working in the family-owned kennel.

Among her many collections are an award-winning set of antique perfume bottles, some Fostoria miniatures and child-sized Depression glass pieces.

Whether bought for investment or enjoyment, glass is one thing you can't lose on, said Mrs. Smith.

Besides, said Mrs. Dick, collecting is "good therapy."

Juanita Smith holds a Wild Turkey platter, part of a game set on display in her shop. A game set consists of a platter and plates, but no cups or saucers.

Lloyd, Dreier debate

By DON GREEN
Staff Writer

Echoing some themes sounded two years ago, Congressman Jim Lloyd and Republican challenger Dave Dreier met Thursday in Montclair in their first head-to-head debate of the campaign.

Lloyd, 58, seeking election to a fourth term representing the 35th district, pointed to his 35 years of service in the Navy, local government and Congress and said the contest boils down to "youth versus maturity."

Dreier, 28 making his second effort to unseat the incumbent, called Lloyd part of the Democrat-controlled Congress sinking after more than 25 years of control by one party. He urged a "bloodless revolution" to put Republicans in office from president down.

An audience of more than 100 heard the candidates speak at the forum sponsored by the Montclair Chamber of Commerce and the Montclair Kiwanis Club. Members of the Chino and Claremont chambers also attended. Mike Noonan, congressional candidate of the Peace and Freedom Party, was not present.

Before answering questions from the audience, both candidates made opening statements that summarized the race as they saw it.

Dreier said Lloyd is "simply not representative of this district," which includes all of the West End.

Referring to Democrats' control of Congress since the early 1950s, Dreier said, "I believe very strongly that what's happened in the last 25 years has created problems for us — the massive deficit spending, the weakened defense posture, rampant double-digit inflation — it's created the problems this nation is faced with.

"Until we make a change in that leadership, we're not going to see a change in the course of our country."

Lloyd said, "Now, let's talk about the issue of the campaign. The only record that we are going to talk about is mine. The only service in any governmental area is mine." Congress. Republicans may be the minority party, but they now represent the majority philosophy in the nation, he said.

The candidates were questioned about labor legislation and other subjects.

Lloyd was called upon to defend his vote in 1975 on common-site picketing. The bill, vetoed by President Ford, would have allowed unions with grievances against one contractor to strike against all companies working at job site.

He said he was "severely beaten about the head and ears" for his vote on the bill during past campaigning and labor probably does not have the votes to get the bill through Congress again.

However, he added he would probably vote for the bill again, saying other unions not on strike currently can take over the workloads of a striking union.

Nursing class offered

Chaffey College will offer a special Nursing Assistant program designed to offer the student the opportunity to utilize the "ladder" educational concept.

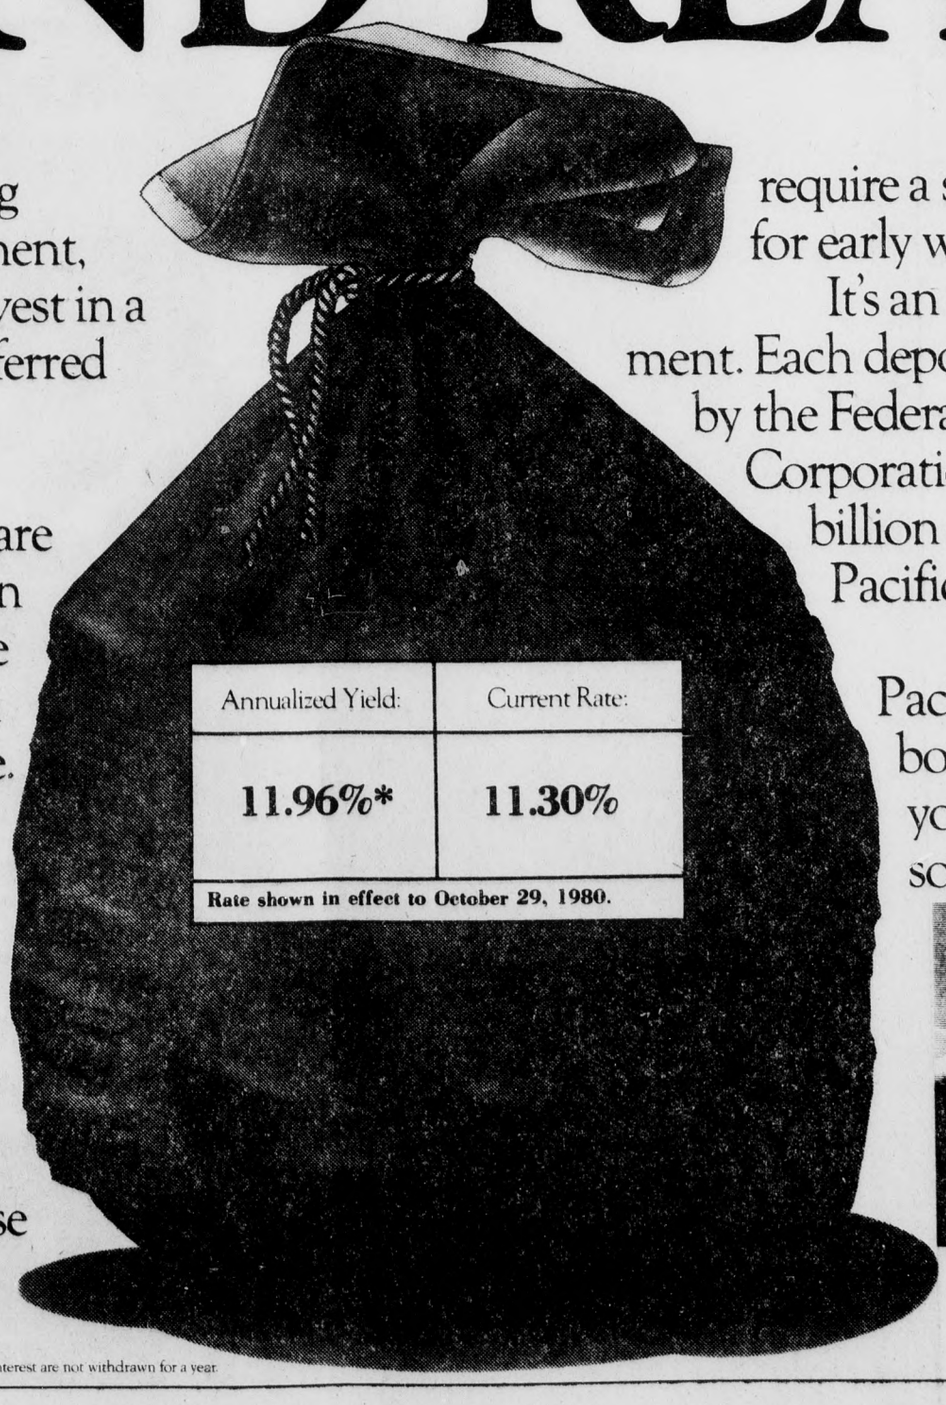

The first quarter is a state - approved precertification program. Upon satisfactory completion of the first quarter the student will receive the State of California certification as a Nursing Assistant. This certification will qualify the student for employment in a long-term health care facility such as a convalescent hospital. Classes are scheduled to meet on Mondays from 8 to 11 a.m., Tuesdays from 8 to 10 a.m. plus one hour of lab. Total hours per week consist of three hours of lecture and 15 hours of lab which include clinical instruction at a local convalescent hospital.

The Chaffey College Certificate of Completion will be awarded upon satisfactory completion of the second quarter, which is designed to prepare the student for employment in hospitals that provide nursing care for adults and children with acute medical - surgical conditions. This quarter consists of both classroom lecture and clinical instruction in a local general hospital.

Enrollment in the Nursing Assistant program is open, but space availability is limited. A satisfactory health examination and a special uniform are required. The only mandatory fee is a $3 health fee per quarter.

Anyone 18 years or older or a high school graduate is eligible to attend Chaffey College. Applications for admission are available at the Alta Loma campus, 5885 Haven Ave., as well as four local satellite centers. The Corona - Norco Education Center is located at 5th and Hamner in Norco; the Fontana Learning Center, 17220 Merrill Ave.; the Chino office located at Chino High School, 5472 park Place.

Who cares about children? 'We do,' says CHS

By LINDA BERGSTEDT
Panorama Eitor

Who cares about children?

"We do," chorus the Children's Home Society, its volunteers and members of CHS Auxiliaries, whose motto is "It's Our Job, But's Everyone's Responsibility."

CHS programs throughout California work in various ways to help children and strengthen families.

The binding theme of the Children's Home Society since its founding in 1891 has been "an unshakeable commitment to the values of family life rightfully belonging and essential to every child."

Programs of the society include parent-child counseling, adoption, foster family care, pregnancy counseling, group care, day care, child advocacy and public education.

The story of Carlos is a case in point.

Carlos's very young, unmarried mother lived with her parents and totally depended on them for child care. When they were killed in an accident, the young mother was so overwhelmed by the responsibilities of parenting that she ran away and left Carlos with her 9-year-old sister.

After surviving for a while on candy bars and whatever else his young aunt could provide, Carlos then lived in various homes of relatives, including one aunt and uncle who physically abused him.

When he finally was returned to his young mother, she as still a child herself and not ready to cope with parenting, relinquished Carlos, then 5, to the Children's Home Society for adoptive placement.

In a CHS foster home, Carlos received loving care. His speech development was poor and he had been considered retarded. Medical examination revealed that repeated ear infections, improperly cared for, had resulted in a permanent hearing loss; the illnesses, hearing problem and neglect had caused his speech development to lag.

CHS was successful in finding a family with love and understanding to share with Carlos and the wish to adopt him. Ear surgery substantially improved Carlos's hearing; he suddenly complained about the noisy world, especially vacuum cleaners. He is progressing well now is a special school class.

In response to devoted attention and care, Carlos, once a sullen, shy, unresponsive child, has become a happy, enthusiastic, loving little boy. He has blossomed in his new home, where he will have the opportunity to develop to his full potential.

*

Statistics show that not everyone who has a child is equipped to be a parent. Like Carlos's mother, some run away from the responsibility.

Economy shows plus signs

The United States economy is showing preliminary signs of recovery from its second most severe recession in the postwar period, said Dr. Robert T. Parry, senior vice president and chief economist for Security Pacific National Bank.

Parry, reviewing the quarterly Economic Report released today, expects the United States will face double - digit inflation in the fourth quarter of 1980 and throughout 1981. Security Pacific National Bank's report indicates that inflation will not fall below double - digits during 1981.

Persistently large U.S. budget deficits and a growing share of government spending to the total economy provide thrust to the inflation problem. A reversal of the inflationary pressures posed by the government sector is not expected in the coming year.

The report predicts that U.S. inflation should drop from its 1980 average of over 13 percent to around 10 percent in 1981. This improvement will result, in part, from a slowing in the rise of OPEC oil prices. Sluggish growth in consumer demand will also contribute to same easing in inflation, while an acceleration in food prices will limit the moderation in price trends.

"The United States economy struggled under tremendous volatility in financial markets and a decline in overall business activity in the first half of 1980," Parry said. He expects continued financial volatility for the remainder of 1980, noting, however, that the second quarter free - fall of U.S. business activity certainly is concluded and is not likely to be repeated in the future future.

"The rise in the inventory- to- sales ratio during the summer months suggests some inventory liquidation is still required in many areas of the American economy. Cutbacks in employment will characterize the remaining months of 1980," Parry said. Security Pacific National Bank economists believe U.S. unemployment will exceed 8 percent by the end of the year. The early 1981 jobless rate is likely to move even higher.

The bank's economists project a 14 percent decline in U.S. manufacturing production from its most recent peak in the third quarter of 1979, to its low point expected to be reached in the fourth quarter of 1980. Continued inventory liquidiation will dampen manufacturing output into the second quarter of 1981.

Signs of U.S. economic recovery are present, however. Parry expects a gradual increase in U.S. consumer spending in the third quarter of 1980 along with increased U.S. auto sales and modest new growth in the American housing industry. These factors should begin to reverse the trend in manufacturing production declines during the first quarter of 1981.

1. Explore new movements of the body
2. Learn basic skills
3. Begin to build a strong body
4. Learn to play in a group
5. Learn to follow instructions
6. Have fun with other children

Fitness classes

The Ontario West End YMCA is once again offering a new seven - week session of children's classes in movement education. The classes are for the pre-school child and began on Sept. 22 and continue each Tuesday and Thursday morning.

"Kermit the Frog" is a baby fitness class, age 3-11 months and meets at 9 a.m. The "Cookie Monster" classes for toddlers one through five years meet at 9:30 am. and 10 a.m. These are all 30-minute classes.

The Cookie Monster classes offer many activities and exercises such as hoops, ropes, balls, tires, a jump box with ramp and ladder, a tunnel, a parachute, and more.

A child has the essentials, but it takes movement to develop strength, flexibility, endurance and coordination. It takes use and action to develop a strong heart and lungs. What you build for your child at the beginning will be the foundation for all things to come. These classes also help the child to interact with the other children.

Buyer beware of 'too-good' bargains

Sets of ovenware peddled from the back of an unmarked van stopping at offices in industrial parks are not quite the hot deal represented.

A secretary in one office became suspicious when a girl walked into the business and asked if anyone was interested in getting a 31-piece set of Corningware worth about $150 for only $20. Twenty boxes had been left over from a delivery, the girl said, and she was willing to sacrifice them at a low price just to get rid of them.

It just so happened that Barbara, the secretary, had an identical set of the $20 "bargain" ovenware purchased from an office peddler using a similar spiel about 10 months ago. It's been languishing in her garage ever since she read subsequent reports that this cheap Corningware replica might break and possibly explode when used in microwave and conventional ovens.

When Barbara asked the girl if the dishes were really Corningware, she was told "no" but they were very similar. In fact, the ensemble was called Primrose Dream, milk-white cookware that is similar in appearance to Corning's cornflower blue pattern except Primrose Dream flowers are green.

Primrose Dream has been marketed from the back of vans throughout the United States over the past couple of years. The Arizona attorney general banned sales of this cheap ovenware last October and has filed a lawsuit alleging fraud against the distributor.

Lawsuits also have been filed by North Carolina and North Dakota authorities alleging misrepresentations in the sale of Primrose Dream.

Last November the San Diego, Calif., County Sheriff's Department tested 21 pieces of a Primrose Deam set in a 450 - degree oven and, without exception, each piece cracked under normal usage in cooking times of 45 minutes to an hour.

Last March, extensive laboratory testing of Primrose Dream by Corning Glass Works in Corning, N.Y., confirmed that the dishes cracked and broke at normal oven temperatures and exploded when used in a broiler. Breakage especially occurred when dishes were taken directly from the refrigerator to the oven, or vice versa or rinsed while hot.

Genuine diamond stud earrings for $5 a pair plus $1 postage — and sounds incredible.

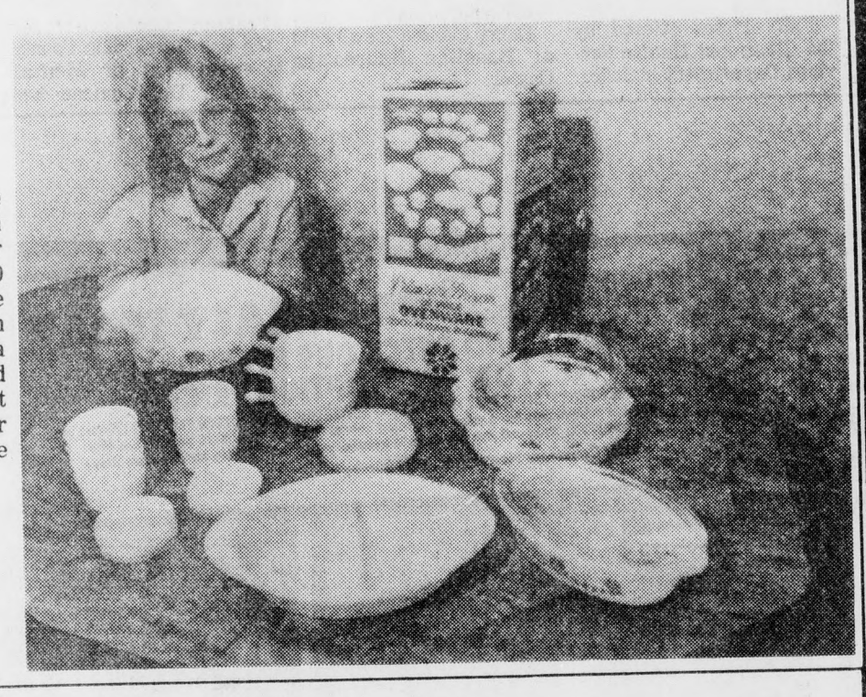

Yet that's what the New York firm of Abernathy and Closther Ltd. has been advertising lately. The Manhattan Better Business Bureau sent away for a pair and had them analysed by a certified gemologist. Yes, they were genuine 10-facet round diamonds of very poor quality with a retail value of about — $5.

Of course you could barely see the diamonds with the naked eye since they were about the size of a pin prick or a sharpened pencil point. The key thing to note in the diamond seller's ads or mailer is the designation .25 point, 10-facet round diamond. Since there are 100 points in one carat, one point would be one-hundredth of a carat and .25 point would be one four - hundredth of a carat.

To keep the little devils from sliding through a woman's ears, Abernathy and Closther wisely attached them to a mirror-like backing about the diameter of a one-carat gem. This backing was secured to a yellow metal post by prongs.

Since Abernathy is sending what its advertisement describes, U.S. Postal Service investigations in New York have not filed any complaints but are keeping an eye on the firm.

"We do have a case open on them for investigating possible mail fraud ... they are being honest in the ads, but the thing that concerns us is people might not understand the grading of diamonds and are going to think they're getting one-fourth carat diamonds when they're not," said postal inspector Sherry Trueax.

This 31-piece bakeware set was a "hot" bargain that left Donna Slater cold. After paying $20 for this Primrose Dream pattern cookware sold by a woman in an unmarked van she learned that they can break under normal usage in the oven.

Home insurance: check fine print

Along with everything else, home owners insurance has grown increasingly complicated in recent years. Liability, deductibles, exemptions, risk ratings, and other considerations are part of the problem, and more than one consumer may suspect that the confusion is deliberate.

Home owners insurance, however, is not a fixed expense as many consumers may believe. There are ways to cut down on this expense while providing your family with maximum protection.

The most important thing for a home owner to do in order to reduce his surance costs is to learn the insurance companies' language. Find out what is meant by all of the $3 words and learn to read the fine print.

You obviously must buy insurance for your home, either as a requirement of the mortgage company or as a matter of common sense. But don't be misled by accepting your mortgage company's advice on insurance. They are concerned with protecting their investment. You must make sure that your equity is also protected, as well as personal possessions included in the home and other items.

At one time, home insurance was purchased in separate policies — one for fire, one for personal liability, etc., but most companies today offer package deals which include all types of coverage in one basket. This is generally about 25 percent cheaper than buying separate policies.

Even more important is the misguided notion that all home insurance policies are alike. Although this is true in some instances because of state laws, you can still find real bargains by shopping around, perhaps using a telephone survey of local insurance companies.

The first type of coverage you will need is basic fire protection. This protects your home, not only against fire, but also against some natural disasters, riots, aircraft, and other dangers in most cases.

Another part of your package is called extended coverage. This includes protection against plumbing disasters, broken windows, vandalism, and smoking damage from a fireplace, as well as other unusual problems.

But wait, there's more — added extended coverage, a sometimes costly addition to your coverage will normally cover all experses which are not specifically exempted in your policy. Exemptions are likely to include termite damage, earthquakes, war, and nuclear radiation.

Another kind of coverage is for the contents of your home and other personal property, which normally includes a high deductible. Finally, there is liability insurance to protect you from lawsuits associated with injuries to other people.

Although many of the basic costs involved in insurance are fixed, such as the efficiency rating of your local fire department, the type of house you live in, the area of the country in which you reside, there are two things you can do to cut costs.

One is by proper use of deductible clauses. If you don't have a deductible, chances are you are paying too much for insurance. Often a $50 deductible can save you many times as much in the long run.

Another way to cut costs is to avoid monthly or even quarterly installments. If you can raise the cash to pay off your three- year policy all at once, you can save as much as 20 percent per year on the cost of your coverage.

Federal budget deficit may hit $75 billion in '81

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

Most economists say the 1981 federal budget deficit will be about double what the Carter administration now says, but a prominent investment management firm has upped the ante even higher: Wright Investors' Service of Bridgeport, Conn., now believes that the deficit will hit $75 billion in 1981 and a cumulative $100 billion over the five quarters of the current recession.

"And both those numbers could be understated," said economist Jatin Mehta, who also recommended in an interview that the government make low - interest loans available to companies for capital investment.

Moreover, neither figure includes the deficit of the so-called off-budget agencies, which Congress excludes from the budget. These are such entities as the Postal Service, Federal Financing Bank, Federal National Mortgage Association, Federal Home Loan Banks, Federal Land Banks and others. Current estimates are that the off - budget agencies will spend or borrow more than $30 billion.

"The administration itself has said that the deficit will be $30 billion without a tax cut. A tax cut of $25 billion to $30 billion is being discussed. That would boost the deficit to $55 billion or so.

"Then, we are assuming that the administration has underestimated the depth and length of the recession. Transfer payments (various ways of paying money to the unemployed) will rise more than the administration anticipates. So expenditures will be higher and receipts lower than now anticipated," said Mehta.

The government estimates it will receive $604 billion in receipts. Wright is forecasting $850 billion. The government is estimating $633.8 billion in expenditures. Wright sees $655 billion.

The huge deficits must be supported by government borrowing, which in turn drains funds from the private sector. That process, in turn, means that money is not spent to build factories and buy machinery. Thus, productivity falls — and inflation soars as a result.

As a way of correcting the problem, John Winthrop Wright, president of the firm bearing his name, proposed that the Federal Reserve henceforth make money available at low - interest rates for capital expenditures and other lending purposes which would enhance productivity.

However, the same wouldn't apply to other kinds of loans.

"For instance, every day I get something from a bank asking me to borrow money on the equity in my home. Such non - productive loans as these would be excluded from our program," said Mehta.

He conceded that under a plan offering low - rate loans for capital expenditures, money supply growth would be high. However, the increase in money growth would be more than offset eventually by the increase in productivity.

That is, under the formula that inflation is "too much money chasing too few goods," the increase in productivity brought as a result of the low - rate loans would boost the amount of goods produced by the American economy, thus mitigating the effect of the "too much money" brought about by the low - rate loans.

He pointed out that since early 1977, expenditures for new plant and equipment in the United States have risen from 7.2 percent of gross national product (the economy's total output of goods and services) to an estimated 7.6 percent. However, consumer installment debt has grown from 15.7 percent of disposable personal income (consumer purchasing power) to 17.5 percent, and consumer mortgage debt has risen from 54.3 percent of purchasing power to 58.9 percent.

Parents join teachers' protest

By JIM MARXEN
Staff Writer

Teachers in the Central School District received support from four parents Thursday night in a growing dispute over salary adjustments.

With hints of recall in the air, board members were told by those parents that teachers deserve more than a scheduled seven-percent salary increase.

A crowd of 100, of which 80 were teachers, received no response from the board on their request that the salary increases be made competitive with those in surrounding districts.

One parent charged that the board was against teachers and indicated that talk of recalling board members had circulated.

The statement evoked support from many of the teachers present who gave a standing ovation.

Teachers in the district are in their final year of a three-year contract which set salary increases for all three years. The maximum increase allowable under the contract is seven percent but teachers feel it is no longer a fair increase.

District officials have maintained they are merely following the wording of the contract and have gone further by offering the seven percent increase now instead of in February.

That increase, according to Supt. Norman Guith would have come in the form of retroactive pay.

In response to the board's silence, teachers closed their doors during an open house earlier this month, saying they were doing no more than the contract required them to do.

Teachers have also refused to participate in a curriculum committee meeting in late September and have resigned from other district committees.

The district responded by threatening to place letters of reprimand in the teachers' files and with legal action in the form of an unfair labor practices suit.

But those threats appear to have done little to the teachers who continued their effort to get the contract reopened.

Parents speaking on behalf of teachers chastized the board for giving substitute teachers a $5-a-day salary increase while not giving a "fair" increase to teachers.

Candace Sullivan said trustees were willing to pay substitutes fairly and "had better pay teachers fairly."

Rick Carter questioned the board's decision to boost Guith's salary without giving teachers more than seven percent.

Planners OK Condo units

By KEN SWART
Staff Writer

Construction of an eight-unit condominium complex on Bandera Street near Central Avenue in Montclair was approved Monday by the Planning Commission.

Commissioners okayed a tentative tract map for the small development, giving Jan Silletto, part-owner of the city's nearby car dealership, the required go-ahead to begin building.

In the past, commissioners have expressed hope that the new condominiums will help improve the run-down apartment building area located nearby.

In separate action, the commission granted a two-year extension to an existing five-year contract allowing a landfill operation on San Jose Street near the flood control channel to continue.

Before approving the extension, however, Commissioners Ed Benrock and Frank Decoteau said the 2.47 acre site should not be unsightly when completed.

They both agreed to a condition requiring that "the lot should be brought to ground level with a minimum six feet of 'clean' landfill comparable to the surrounding soil."

Political participation

Politically active persons in the Chaffey Community College District can earn transferable credit by enrolling in "Political Participation" while working in congressional or assembly election campaigns.

The unique course, that combines political activities with classroom seminars, is believed to be the only one of its kind in the United States, according to History Professor Charles Miller, who teaches the course with Dr. Michael Viera of the political science department.

Miller said students enrolled in the course will work in the 35th Congressional District and 65th Assembly District races.

In the 35th Congressional race incumbent Democrat Jim Lloyd is being challenged by Republican David Drier. The 65th Assembly race has Democrat Jim Carmer and Republican Chuck Bader seeking election to the seat being vacated by Bill McVittie, who has been appointed a superior court judge by Gov. Jerry Brown.

These two races were chosen, Miller commented, because they promise to be among the most interesting and may be among the closest in the Southland.

Students enrolled in the course are required to perform 48 hours of field work in the campaign of their choice. They are required to sign in and out at campaign headquarters and keep a daily journal of their activities.

Each campaign headquarters will have a field supervisor who will monitor the students' activities. Jack Newman will supervise students working in the Lloyd campaign. His counterpart in the Drier campaign will be June Wallin. Students working at the Cramer headquarters will be supervised by Mary Jo Rossi. Josephine Egelhoff will supervise students working in the Bader campaign.

In addition, Miller and Viera will work with their students in the field as much as possible.

"The students' campaign activities are closely monitored to make sure they aren't just doing menial tasks, such as stuffing and licking envelopes," Miller said. "We want to be sure our students are involved in the total campaign process. We want this to be a real learning experience for them."

The intent of the course, he added, is to develop political awareness and political sensitivity by participation, not just reading textbooks.

In addition to the field work, students will attend a series of seven seminars on campus. The seminars will be held on Tuesdays, beginning at 6:10 p.m., and Fridays, beginning at 8 a.m.

The seminars will cover various aspects of political campaigns, including voter registration, campaign financing, public relations, party structure, platforms, precinct characteristics and telephoning. During the seminars, guest lectures will discuss their particular areas of campaign expertise.

High school students may enroll in "Political Participation" through the Advance Placement Program. Students enrolled in the course will earn four units of credit that is transferable to a four year college or university.

Students may enroll in the course during late registration, held the first week of school, Sept. 16 through 22. Students enrolled in the course spring quarter may enroll again for the fall and receive credit.

The woman is a victim of rape. She's been called to testify against her accused attacker. She sits alone outside the courtroom, scared and confused. Nobody is there to help or console her.

Starting next month, someone will be there. The San Bernardino County District Attorney's Office will begin its new victim-witness advocacy program designed to help anyone who is the victim of a crime or called to testify in court.

The program itself is not new, but will be greatly expanded, according to coordinator Jacqueline Vaughn, who will oversee offices in Ontario, San Bernardino and Victorville.

Since 1977, the Probation operated a county program to aid victims of violent crimes. The county Board of Supervisors placed the district attorney's office in charge of the program last June.

The Probation Department opposed the transfer of the program, but the supervisors said they felt the district attorney's close association with law enforcement agencies had an "advantage of built-in public trust, while the public often associates 'probation' with the defendant."

A recent state law, SB 393, nearly tripled the funding available for such a program. The county will receive $101,252 this year and a projected $108,484 in 1981-82.

The money comes from fines and penalty assessments levied against criminal defendants. Persons convicted of misdemeanors pay $5 into the program and felons pay $20. "In effect, crooks are paying for our program," said Vaughn.

However, Vaughn pointed out, that money barely covers her salary, the salaries of three Victim Advocates, mileage costs and office furniture.

Office space and telephones are being provided by the district attorney's office. The remainder of costs will have to be financed by contributions from the community.

Vaughn, 30, a recent recipient of a doctorate in political science from the University of California at Berkeley, has been scurrying all over the county trying to raise money for the program.

Each office will have a paid staff of six — the Victim Advocate, in charge of the office, and five caseworkers hired through the Comprehensive Employment Training Act.

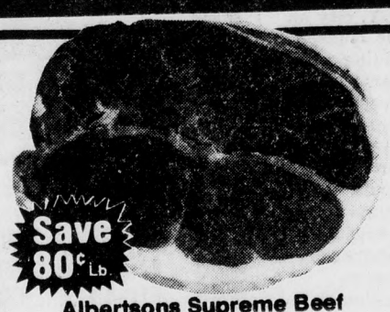

Making up the remainder of the staff will be a crew of student interns and volunteers. Vaughn is especially seeking senior citizens to work with child victims and witnesses or the children of victims and witnesses.

Barbara Johnson, formerly a supervisor at the Department of Public Social Services in Ontario, will head the West End program, to be housed inside the district attorney's trailer at the West Valley court complex in Ontario.

Prospective volunteers should contact Vaughn in San Bernardino at 383-2461, the West End district attorney's office at 988-1221, or the victim-witness programs when it opens Nov. 1 at 988-1496.

Planning can improve stay in hospital

By CATE TUTTLE
Copley News Service

Hospital patients who feel some control over their environment and personal well - being improve faster than those who feel helpless and dependent.

One area where most patients express a need to have control is in their own grooming, and indeed, many are capable of doing so, especially during recovery. All of us like knowing we look presentable no matter what our situation.

During a recent tour of the Community Hospital in Long Beach, I asked the director of patient services, Jo Whelan, what personal items patients can bring with them to boost their morale and facilitate their own comfort. Her replies, along with the enthusiastic suggestions of nurses, follow. You'll find that some of these ideas will also make good gift items for the hospitalized.

For Women Only: Bring all your makeup — whatever you need to feel attractive. Also bring hair grooming items such as brushes, combs, small mirror, clips, rubber bands and head scarves. One nurse said, "Keeping hair up is very important. I remember a woman who and was concerned about forgetting her hairspray!"

Also nail polish is okay except during surgery. So if you have a bedridden female friend and want to offer something special, ask if you can give her a manicure or pedicure.

For Both Men and Women: Bring personal shampoo and conditioners (doctors must okay their use), razors, toothbrush and paste, shower cap (you may not be allowed to get your hair wet while showering), personal soap, hand cream, bath powder and mouthwash. (Most hospitals provide these items but at a greatly increased price.)

In addition, bring your own slippers, but stay away from the knit or bootie types as they can precipitate a fall on slippery hospital floors.

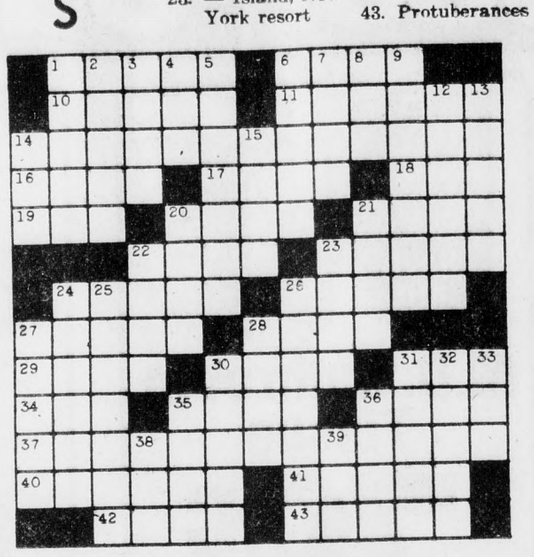

Things Everyone Foirgets and Everyone Wishes They'd Remembered: Personal telephone book, eyeglasses, pictures of the family, magazines and books, and most of all, a TV Guide.

Especially Good Gifts: Some patients have time to engage in simple hobbies while recovering. These pastimes can actually help restore a sense of usefulness and, therefore, can be quite important in getting well quickly. Most everyone will want a pen and writing paper. Others can do needlepoint or knitting. Some like crossword puzzles or watercolors. For more relaxing entertainment, many patients would appreciate a small transistor with earplugs so they could listen while others nap.

Things to Leave Home: Jewelry (wedding bands are okay), cash (except for $5), credit cards, perfume (other patients may be allergic) and any electrical equipment.

Good Advice From The Nurses: If you're going to give the floor nurses a gift, make it a basket of healthy fruit rather than fattening candy and give it when you enter the hospital rather than when you leave.

Blood donors needed

The regular October drawing at Doctors' Hospital of Montclair, in cooperation with the Blood Bank of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties, will be held Thursday, Oct. 23 from 2:30 to 6:30 p.m. The drive will be held in the conference room of the hospital located at 5000 San Bernardino St. in Montclair.

This is a community blood drive. One of the regularly scheduled drawings held each year for the benefit of those living in the Montclair, Ontario, Pomona area. Clubs, churches, fraternal and social organizations, businesses, industries, and private individuals are urged to participate and support this community project.

This blood drawing is part of the continuing program to supply blood for residents of San Bernardino and Riverside Counties. At the present time over 200 units of blood are needed daily to meet the needs of some 28 hospitals in the two - county area. As new uses are discovered and as the population continues to increase, the need for more blood donors, regular blood donors, becomes a subject of real concern.

Donating blood is everyone's responsibility, not just a small handful of concerned citizens. Without continued support, shortages of blood develop, and the ability of the Blood Bank to supply blood for even emergency transfusions is adversely affected.

For further information, please contact Doctors' Hospital at 621-3880 or the Blood Bank in San Bernardino at 885-6503.

Special boaters occasion

Boaters are invited to enter the Mission Bay Christmas Boat Parade of Lights scheduled Saturday, Dec. 13, 1980.

The parade will start at 7 p.m. and follow a 5-mile route along the shoreline of Mission Bay. The lighting of Sea World's giant "Christmas Tree" will take place at 9 p.m. when the parade ends at the North Ingraham Street Bridge.

All boats must be illuminated, decorated and under power.

The best viewing areas will be along Riviera and Crown Point Shores, the western side of Fiesta Island, and Ski Beach on East Vacation Island. There are no parking or admission charges.

All entrants will receive participant plaques compliments of Sea World, according to chairwoman Nora Hyer.

There is no registration fee and entry blanks may be obtained by contacting the Mission Bay Associates' office at (714) 276-2800 or at the Visitor Information Center on Mission Bay.

OIA travel total again shows drop

The number of travelers using Ontario International Airport declined for the eighth consecutive month in September, when the total passenger count reached only 155,018.

This was a 22.2 percent decrease from the September 1979 total of 199,-182.

The September figure brought the nine-month total for 1980 to 1,549,656, compared to the 1979 figure of 1,795,029 — a decrease of 13.7 percent.

The last passenger increase — amounting to 5 percent — occurred in January.

However, airport spokesman Dennis Watson pointed out, 1979 was a record-setting year, when 2,360,665 passengers used the airport during the 12-month period.

He said the October totals may show improvement because of extra flights received during one week from John Wayne Airport in Orange County, where the runway was closed for repair.

First rule of survival

Single needs self-esteem

By PATRICIA DIBSIE
Copley News Service

Self-acceptance and confidence were a basic part of Carol Murdock's personality.

And then she was challenged by the problems of coping in a society where a divorcee, as she puts it, "was the only person regarding in this society more poorly than an illegitimate child."

Especially a single parent.

In the following 13 years, Murdock picked up the usual comments about her chosen situation:

"Can't understand why you did it. ... I suppose you regret it now. ... You'll have to expect problems, divorce is hardest on children. ..."

But now there's a new twist on this modern-day occurrence.

According to statistics gathered by a number of private and governmental sources, the single-parent family is fast becoming the norm.

By the 1990s, children living in a two-parent household will be in the minority. In this decade, one out of every five households will be headed by a single parent.

Murdock has spent the last several years talking to single parents — both mothers and fathers — sociologists, psychologists, educators and lawyers about the social implications and changes due society because of this phenomenon. The result is a book — "Single Parents Are People, Too" (Butterick Publishing, $9.95).

Among the topics she covers are legal issues, emotional adjustments, time management, budgeting money, getting a job, dealing with loneliness, visits from a former spouse, sex, privacy, dating and day care.

When asked what she felt was the most important issue a single parent faces in the beginning, she replied without hesitation: "Self-esteem."

Murdock: "The first rule of survival as a single parent is to find yourself and love yourself. It all starts by knowing that you exist as a complete and unique individual. You don't have to measure up to anyone else's standards or live by anyone else's code. Until a person accepts this, he or she will feel lost and defeated."

Most people will concede that our parents were not all that we wanted them to be, she said.

"And it's important to realize that we, in turn, won't be all our children wish us to be."

Mudock believes that a divorce can leave a person free to be himself or herself — a self that may have been distorted to please a mate.

It is after a parent learns to accept his or her problems and deal with them (seeking counseling, if necessary) that the parent can expect to be able to deal effectively with being the best parent possible.

The author has compiled a list of useful "coping" guidelines:

— Separate your real feelings and needs from what you think society is requiring of you as male and female role players.

— Take tiny risks and give yourself permission to make mistakes.

— Set realistic goals for yourself and don't wait until a job is over before assessing your progress.

— Consider the present as a series of choices, not inevitabilities. (If a circumstance forces you temporarily into an unpleasant situation, learn what you can from it and begin to make plans to move ahead.)

— Seek help when you need it — from family, friends or from professionals. ("Life isn't a test — you aren't cheating when you request help from others.")

"There are so many things single parents need to learn about themselves in the beginning," Murdock said. "It can make all the difference in the world. Most of what needs to be dealt with is so basic, but people get blinded and feel so unworthy of a good life after a divorce. Especially if there are children involved."

Things like getting started on a new social life. But how?

"Plan some social engagements that don't include the kids. Go to a movie with a friend, join co-workers in a Dutch-treat dinner out, go to a friend's home for dinner or to watch TV. Just make sure there's something you do occasionally that involves you with other friends and doesn't include the children.

"And save personal problems for close friends or therapy sessions. There's some truth to the old saw that 'Laugh and the whole world laughs with you, cry and you cry alone.'

"These get-togethers with friends are supposed to be fun occasions, remember? Pack along your problems and you ruin their evening as well as your own!"

After the parent puts his or her own picture back together, it's time to focus on the children and emotions involving them directly.

And that means dealing with anger, too.

AMC chief predicts weak start but strong end for his firm in '81

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

"We think 1981 will be the flip side of 1980 for the auto industry. While 1980 started strong and ended weak, 1981 will start weak and end strong."

Thus speaks Paul Tippett, president of American Motors Corp. He has reason to hope his prediction comes true: After making $20 million in the first half, the company lost $85 million in the third quarter and will lose at least as much in the fourth, he conceded — leading to a loss of about $150 million on the year.

"But we're the only domestic auto manufacturer which increased its market share in 1980. From 1.7 percent of the domestic market last year, we moved to 2.5 percent this year. As a percent of the total market (domestic and imports), we moved from 1.5 to 2 percent," said Tippett in an interview.

But a small move in a market share isn't going to move stoic bankers looking at a profit - and - loss statement $150 million in the red.

In July the seven banks which had earlier extended a $150 million line of credit to American Motors cut off that line at $90 million.

AMC then turned around and got a "bridge loan" from France's Renault.

During 1982, AMC and Renault will start building cars jointly in the United States. Tippett and his board are saying that it will portend a new era for beleaguered AMC.

"But the 1981 model year will in no way be a bridge year," said Tippett.

Some critics contend that the company's 1981 models won't compete very well on a mileage basis with other domestic and foreign entries, but Tippett vehemently disagrees. The Eagle SX-4, which has a standard four-cylinder engine and four-speed transmission, "is a sporty four-wheel drive auto that will get 20 mpg in the city. That's as good as the Chevy Citation," he said.

The Renault 18i (sedan and wagon) "has been very successful in Europe. It gets better fuel economy than the Honda and performs equal to the BMW," said Tippett.

AMC's Jeeps "are the most fuel - efficient of the four - wheel drives," said Tippett, although sales of such vehicles plunged with the rest of the market during the bloodbath of early 1980.

In 1981, "We expect to increase our market share again," said Tippett.

Apple harvest now under way at Oak Glen

By PAT DELAHOYDE
Staff Writer

Each autumn there is a rush to the Oak Glen apple country.

This year's rush has begun, with a harvest of Red and Golden Delicious, Starking Delicious and Red Rome apples picked, packed and waiting to be purchased.

Apples are sold directly from grower to consumer. Some growers permit walks through their orchards, but because the apple tree is fragile, visitors are not allowed to pick the fruit themselves.

The apples come from 17 different orchards.

Apple ranches are family-owned, and some of the ranches in Oak Glen have been in the hands of the owner-family for nearly a century.

Visitors can witness the tasks involved in apple ranching. The procedures of picking, grading, packing, cider pressing and apple pie making are done out in the open where all can see.

The exodus to Oak Glen is an outing the entire family can enjoy. And about 100,000 families each year make the outing.

Besides the fruit, pie and cider, a cool climate and pure mountain air can be appreciated by those beseiged by heat and smog in the West End.

Mountain Town and Oak Tree Village hold such attractions as antique marts, a specialty cheese market, an old-time candy store, curio shops, an art gallery, a petting zoo, camping facilities and several eating establishments.

Most ranches have extensive picnic areas set among the oak and sycamore groves that border each orchard. San Bernardino County maintains a recreation area next to the Wilshire Ranch. There is no charge for any of the picnic areas.

The apple season lasts through the first of the year, and packing sheds are open every day of the week through the entire season.

Oak Glen can be reached by taking the San Bernardino Freeway east past the city of Redlands to the Yucaipa off-ramp. Once off the freeway, the way to apple country is well-marked.

New Zealander stops here on round-the-world trip

By MARGE GROSS
Staff Writer

A vivacious, small woman with the spirit of true adventure in her heart spent three days in Ontario before returning to New Zealand after a round-the-world trip.

Janette Falconer of Mairangi Bay, nearby to East Coast Bays, Ontario's Sister City in New Zealand, was the house guest of Carolyn West of Ontario, a Sister City Committee member.

Falconer is an acquaintance of Alan McCulloch, mayor of East Coast Bays, who visited Ontario in August. Since she was coming across the United States to leave for home from California, she decided to visit Ontario.

An avid traveler, Falconer said she has lived in various places all over the world. She decided to take a six months leave of absence from her job in an Auckland hospital where she works in the children's ward. "I'm a sort of substitute mom," she said.

With a rapid-fire dialogue in her thick New Zealand accent, Falconer described her adventures since leaving home six months ago.

She avoids luxury travel. "I like to go overland ... by bus, train," she said explaining that it is not only cheaper, but gives her the opportunity to mingle with the people of the countries she passes through.

Falconer described crossing India in "an ancient bus with no facilities ... none of the Greyhound luxuries." The scenery was beautiful, she said, "But it was searing hot and buggy."

When it came to going into Iran, Falconer said her bus was the last one allowed in the country since it was a week after the United States' abortive military effort to rescue the hostages.

"We (the 16 bus passengers) were locked in a room but let out at night," she said. "We didn't know if they were going to shoot us or not." The bus passengers were of many nationalities. But they were allowed to board the bus, and with two guards, drove across Iran.

"It took us five days to get through," she said. "Iran is one huge desert. We drove night and day taking turns and looking down the barrel of loaded machine guns."

Finally, the guards let the bus stop two nights. "I think the guards were tired," she laughed. "There were no camping grounds, no tents... we just had to sleep with all the creepy things."

When the bus was within 30 miles of Tehran, they went through the place where three days before the American servicemen's bodies had been displayed. "It was not a good place for foreigners," she said.

Finally, Falconer said, even after a bad accident which pushed in the back of the bus and ruined the luggage, the weary travelers crossed into Eastern Turkey ... which they found "plastered with soldiers on every corner."

The traveler left her bus companions in Athens, Greece, and went on alone, "traveling on a shoestring," to Italy, through Austria and into Germany.

"I finally had to get to a place where the bed didn't move" she said. "I went to England and spent three and a half weeks with my parents."

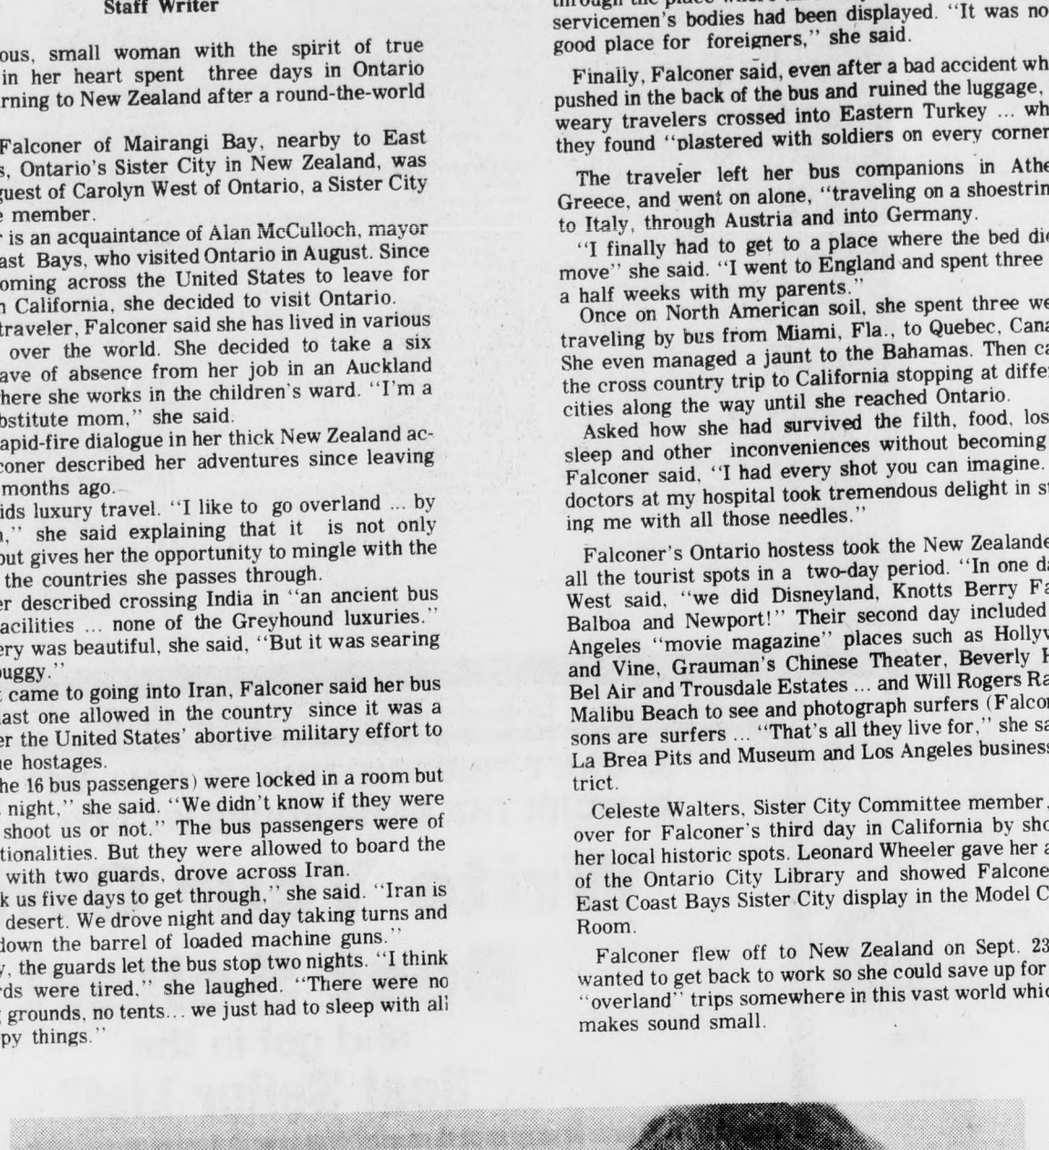

Once on North American soil, she spent three weeks traveling by bus from Miami, Fla., to Quebec, Canada. She even managed a jaunt to the Bahamas. Then came the cross country trip to California stopping at different cities along the way until she reached Ontario.

Asked how she had survived the filth, food, loss of sleep and other inconveniences without becoming ill, Falconer said, "I had every shot you can imagine. The doctors at my hospital took tremendous delight in sticking me with all those needles."

Falconer's Ontario hostess took the New Zealander to all the tourist spots in a two-day period. "In one day," West said, "we did Disneyland, Knotts Berry Farm, Balboa and Newport!" Their second day included Los Angeles "movie magazine" places such as Hollywood and Vine, Grauman's Chinese Theater, Beverly Hills, Bel Air and Trousdale Estates ... and Will Rogers Ranch, Malibu Beach to see and photograph surfers (Falconer's sons are surfers ... "That's all they live for," she said.), La Brea Pits and Museum and Los Angeles business district.

Celeste Walters, Sister City Committee member, took over for Falconer's third day in California by showing her local historic spots. Leonard Wheeler gave her a tour of the Ontario City Library and showed Falconer the East Coast Bays Sister City display in the Model Colony Room.

Falconer flew off to New Zealand on Sept. 23. She wanted to get back to work so she could save up for more "overland" trips somewhere in this vast world which she makes sound small.

Janette Falconer of Mairangi Bay, near East Coast Bays, New Zealand, was a recent visitor to Ontario. Falconer was on her way home after an around-the-world trip she described as "overland." Here she describes the depth of the sand on her after sleeping on the bus' floor in the Iranian desert. Falconer had numerous adventures including being escorted out of Iran by armed guards. This happened the week after the United States' abortive military effort to rescue the hostages.

Local author, journalist dead at 77

Memorial services have been set for Esther Boulton Black, 77, of Claremont, who died Oct. 8 at Kaiser Hospital in Fontana.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m. next Saturday, Oct. 18, at the Claremont United Church of Christ, Congregational, 233 W. Harrison Ave. in Claremont. Private cremation will precede the service.

A native of Caldwell, Idaho, Mrs. Black was a resident of Upland and Claremont for 61 years. She graduated from Chaffey High School and Chaffey College and held degrees from the University of Arizona and the Columbia University School of Journalism.

After a career with newspapers in Pomona and Upland, Mrs. Black was the original secretary to the Upland Housing Authority for several years and was housing manager of Los Olivos from 1940 to 1955.

She then returned to school to obtain her teaching credentials at Claremont Graduate School. For 12 years, she taught third grade at Baldy View Elementary School in Upland, where her book, "Stories of Old Upland," became the source of study for local history. The third edition of the book was published late last year.

After her retirement from teaching, the author researched and wrote another book, "Rancho Cucamonga and Dona Merced," the story of the Rains home in Cucamonga and the ill-fated lives of the family that built it in the mid-1800s.

This second book was designated as a Bicentennial Publication by the San Bernardino County Bicentennial Committee. She was honored with a national award, Ella Victoria Dobbs, in 1977 by Phi Lambda Theta, the national honor professional association in education, for the research done on this book.

She was at work on another book at the time of her death.

Mrs. Black represented the city of Upland when she carried the official papers to Mildura, Australia, when the two became Sister Cities.

A member of the Claremont United Church of Christ, Congregational, Mrs. Black was a past president of the Upland Business and Professional Women's Club, a member of the Upland Woman's Club, the Friends of the Upland Library, the Town Affiliation Association and the League of American Pen Women. She was a charter member of the Rancho Cucamonga Historical Society.

Mrs. Black is survived by her husband, Douglas R. Black of Claremont; two sons, James Black of Carbon Canyon and Richard Black of Cerritos; a daughter, Mrs. Robert (Ethyl) Deffeyes of Arlington, Texas; a foster daughter, Mrs. Morris (Marguerita) Brinkman of El Cajon; a sister, Betty Herndon of Tucson, Ariz.; and five grandchildren.

Memorial gifts may be made to the Casa de Rancho Cucamonga Historical Society, P.O. Box 401, Rancho Cucamonga, CA 91730, or to one's favorite charity. Stone Funeral Home of Upland is in charge of arrangements.
